Relevant Learning

We work tirelessly to implement educational “best practices” that yield the greatest levels of student learning and growth.

Every school corporation wants to provide its students with RELEVANT learning experiences that prepare them for the world beyond its K-12 classrooms. Most educators would support a statement along these lines, but what does “relevant learning” truly look like? Merriam Webster defines relevant as “having significant and demonstrable bearing on the matter at hand.” With that definition in mind, I assert that educational leaders are saying we want our students to have learning experiences that add value in a manner that is easily seen in (and by) our graduates.

We have used the phrase, “learning for all, all for learning” as our mission statement in Greenfield-Central for over a decade. The words are still as meaningful for our staff today as they were when we first penned them. Everything that we do as a school corporation should start and end with the concept of learning. For this reason, we regularly ask four questions in our schools that revolve around this theme of student learning.

1) Are we appropriately identifying what we want students to learn and be able to do?

- 2) Are we effectively measuring student learning in these areas?
- 3) Are we making the appropriate adjustments for students who are not learning the designated curriculum?
- 4) Are we enriching the learning opportunities for students who have already achieved mastery of the prescribed curriculum?

In G-C, our teachers are discussing and debating these thought-provoking questions every Tuesday in small groups we call Professional Learning Communities (PLCs). This setting creates an environment that is almost magical. It is truly cerebral work for our staff, and the results of the friction lead to problem solving that benefits all students. It is definitely an environment in which “iron sharpens iron.”

All four of the questions listed above are important, yet I would go on record to state that the first question is the most important one for us to consider. “What do we expect students to learn and be able to do?” Are we, as a corporation, focused on the things that make education relevant for our students? We certainly do not always get this right, but most of the time I truly believe we do. For example, every time the state has changed the content standards in the last ten years, we have quickly worked to “retool the die” to ensure that our students are prepared to demonstrate the right type of learning in local and state assessments.

Beyond changing our curriculum maps to reflect the new standards, we are constantly looking at the instructional practices that we use as well. We work tirelessly to implement educational “best practices” that yield the greatest levels of student learning and growth. Within the area of instructional practices, we have made a significant shift to include personal computers for all students in grades 6-12 over the last two years. These devices were purchased to be a tool that allows teachers to provide instruction in some ways that were not possible before the digital convergence. We are striving to provide more opportunities for creativity, collaboration, and personalization in learning for our students, and we are seeing more and more evidence of these ends in the classroom as a result of this shift.

Registration is an important activity for the school year. Registering your child on time allows the school to have an accurate count and assists with class placement and balance. This is an opportunity to provide emergency contact information, email addresses, and phone numbers so that school newsletters, two-hour delay or cancellations can be sent to families. Parent online accounts are set-up for new students at registration, so that parents can access grades, attendance and other information. Returning families will use their password (or receive help) to access their account to update information. At the designated times listed below, computers and staff will be available to assist with the process. If a family does not have access to a computer or the internet in their home, at registration a request to have paper copies of report cards and newsletters can be completed. RELEVANT continued from page 1

In Greenfield-Central, we have been deliberate about the pace of change we are directing on the instructional front. We are working to create a blended learning environment (traditional and digital learning opportunities) that is relevant for the students of G-C. We want our students to be ready for whatever awaits them after graduation. For a vast majority of our graduating students, there will certainly be expectations for them to be literate and productive with digital devices, as well as being competent with more traditional means of learning and communicating.

I recently spent some time with the Greenfield-Central leadership team, and we embarked on the task of writing a theory of action for the corporation. We began our exercise with the end in mind...that which we wanted our students to achieve by the end of their thirteen year journey with us. We had lengthy discussion about the profile of a graduate that we wanted all G-C students to resemble. Of course we started with the idea that all students would have at least a basic level of proficiency in the core curriculum that is defined by the state of Indiana. But beyond that obvious characteristic, we were resolute in our commitment to produce creative thinkers, problem solvers, analysts, synthesizers, and lifelong learners. We believe that a relevant educational experience in Greenfield-Central should yield these types of learners. It is this goal that drives us to constantly reflect on the educational experiences we provide for our students.

“...we were resolute in our commitment to produce creative thinkers, problem solvers, analysts, synthesizers, and lifelong learners. We believe that a relevant educational experience in Greenfield-Central should yield these types of learners.”

Despite the fact that the word RELEVANT seems to continually evolve, I believe we have taken broad strides toward our goal of creating a relevant learning experience for all students in the corporation. We will certainly continue to drive toward this objective, and I want to thank you for your partnership in this worthwhile endeavor.

Dr. Harold E. Olin

This new role will provide leadership in the areas of special education, Positive Behavior Intervention Services, and a variety of other areas that impact the programs in place for students in our PK – 12 continuum.

MR. DEVON MARINE leaves his assignment as the principal of Eden Elementary School, where he has been for the past three years. Prior to Eden Elementary, Mr. Marine was the assistant principal at Greenfield Central Junior High School and Maxwell Middle School. Mr. Marine will become the principal of Greenfield Intermediate School.

The new principal at Eden Elementary is MRS. MELIA HAMMONS. Mrs. Hammons has been serving as the assistant principal at Greenfield Intermediate School since 2014. Prior to that position Mrs. Hammons was a teacher at J.B. Stephens Elementary.

MR. JASON CARY is the new principal at Greenfield-Central High School. Mr. Cary served as the principal at Peru High School in northern Indiana for the past four years. Prior to this, he was an assistant principal in that school for three years. Jason also served in an educational leadership position with the Blue River Community School Corporation, where he held the position of Assistant Principal and Athletic Director.

G-CHS Handbook Changes

Greenfield-Central High School is excited to welcome our new Principal, Jason Cary. Along with a new principal, G-CHS has tweaked or added just a few handbook policies.

Dress Code

As for changes coming up in the 2017-2018 school year, we would like to remind students that dress should be college and career ready. When a student is sent to the office for a Dress Code Violation that causes a disruption or interferes with the safety or education of others, they will be provided a change of clothes and a Tuesday School. Students can call home for a change of clothes but we ask parents to understand that our goal is to have students return to class as quickly as possible.

Lunch Detention for Minor Infractions

A new type of detention will also be in effect this school year. We are introducing Lunch Detention. Lunch Detention will be used for minor infractions such as tardies or minor classroom disruptions. Once students get their lunch, they will be escorted to a designated area where they will serve their detention.

Drugs/Alcohol & Student Activities

In regards to student activities, if a student is caught with drugs/alcohol of any form on or off school grounds, students will be removed from the club/organization. As well, if a student in a leadership position is at a party/gathering where drugs/alcohol are present, they will have 15 minutes to remove themselves from the party. As long as the student has not consumed or partaken in any drugs or alcohol, no penalty will be enforced.

On the first offense, the student will have a 25% (up to nine weeks) suspension from club/organization activities. If applicable, the student will share rehabilitation and/or community service information with the Student Activities Director. On the second offense, the student will be removed from clubs/organizations for the remainder of the current school year.

We look forward to welcoming the class of 2021 and encourage all students to find their niche and get involved in our multitude of clubs and athletics!

The school instant alert system also provides updates on delays or school closings.

Families can add/update emergency information during student registration. If there is a need to dismiss students early from school due to inclement weather, parents should ensure students understand their family's early release plan. Please do not call the school officials' home. Administrators will be conferencing to gather facts and make sound decisions about school closings.
