Keys to Thriving in 2020

"If the last three months have taught us anything at all, it is the importance of collaboration, planning, and flexibility."

When people around the world made New Year's resolutions in January of 2020, I do not think anyone aspired to experience a pandemic. The entire phenomenon was really not on the radar of many people in our great country. The events of the last three months have reinforced the fact that circumstances beyond our control can certainly make life interesting for us at times. What can we learn from all of this?

If the last three months have taught us anything at all, it is the importance of collaboration, planning, and flexibility. All three of these components are vital for individuals, families, businesses and community organizations that wish to experience success. They are critically important for our students to learn, and we aspire to model these skills for Greenfield-Central students.

COLLABORATION

*"Alone we can do so little;
together we can do so much."*

HELEN KELLER

During the last quarter of the past school year (spring), our students really needed to count on the support of their families, peers, teachers, neighbors, and many other individuals. That same level of collaboration is going to be necessary again as we embrace the challenges of the fall semester. Let's be frank; there are still many unknowns related to the fall 2020 school experience. Fortunately, our experiences during this past spring assures us that we can accomplish a lot when we work with others. I am confident that Greenfield-Central students will continue to flourish – regardless of the calendar, schedule, or format they find themselves in – because our community has a strong network of support.

PLANNING

"If you give me six hours to cut down a tree, I will spend the first four hours sharpening the axe."

PRESIDENT
ABRAHAM LINCOLN

As your superintendent in Greenfield-Central over the last six years, my team and I have planned for many realities. We have planned construction updates to all school facilities, planned for revisions in the instructional model, and planned multiple professional development opportunities to grow the faculty and staff. In most of these cases, we fully understood the variables and knew how we might minimize the impact of a change in any of those variables.

Yet as I reflect on the full tenure of my time in public education, I can easily say that the pace of change has never matched the period we find ourselves in currently. We are planning for a variety of student experiences and settings in the fall, knowing that multiple variables will continue to change in the next few weeks as we receive updated guidance from the CDC, the Governor, the Department of Education, and state and local health departments. Few people want to draft a complex plan knowing that many of the puzzle pieces are going to be altered, and it is this line of thinking that has caused us to slow down a little bit. Some of our plans for the fall are written in pencil instead of permanent ink.

I know I can count on our students and staff to use the lessons from April and May as a springboard to future successes in the classroom and life beyond the walls of Greenfield-Central.

Registration is an important activity for you and your child.

It allows the school to have an accurate count and assists with class placement and balance. This is an opportunity to provide emergency contact information, email addresses, and phone numbers so that school newsletters, two-hour delay or cancellations can be sent to families. Parent online accounts are set-up for new students at registration, so that parents can access grades, attendance and other information. Returning families will use their password (or receive help) to access their account to update information. At the designated times listed below, computers and staff will be available to assist with the process. If a family does not have access to a computer or the internet in their home, then at registration, you may request to have paper copies of report cards and newsletters available to you. Greenfield-Central Community School Corporation parents are urged to mark their calendars for the following dates:

We have learned that sometimes there are circumstances in our lives that are simply out of our control. During these time of flux, we all should aim to “control what we can control.” I hope that students take time to reflect on what went well last spring and what did not go so well for them. Education is truly a collaborative experience, and students will need to do their part to ensure that the educational experience is as rich as it can be in the fall, regardless of the setting.

FLEXIBILITY

*“Survival is for those who are flexible;
they are smart enough to adapt and they never give up.”*

N. EL DIN

The third foundation of this strong triad is flexibility. There will be challenges in our lives that we simply cannot be prepared for initially. When these types of circumstances happen, we must be willing to adjust our course. I am not suggesting that we change our goal; we simply must sometimes alter our paths to get to our destination. We asked students, staff and families to make some major adjustments in the spring, and we may be making similar requests again in the fall. But let's not take our eyes off of the prize, which is a well-rounded and challenging educational experience for all students. We all play a vital role in making that happen.

The last two months of this school year were challenging. There is no reason to hide from this truth. I can tell you that our students, staff and community members all learned a lot through these unprecedented circumstances. Some aspects of “school as we know it” are going to look a little different as we take steps to move forward in the fall. We understand this reality, and we will be ready for the challenges we will face. We hope you will willingly embark on this journey with us. I thank you in advance for your partnership in this venture.

Construction Projects Move Forward

Several planned construction projects at different locations around our schools were still able to move forward while students were not in the school buildings.

New roofs were installed at Maxwell Intermediate School and J.B. Stephens Elementary School.

Greenfield-Central High School has a new Greenhouse (see article on page 5).

The Greenfield Central Junior High School has an additional gym and new parking area.

Greenfield-Central High School is excited for the start of school this fall!

The G-CHS Performing Arts and Athletic area

One of our major reasons for this excitement is our new Athletic and Performing Arts areas.

Athletically, our Strength and Fitness classes, along with our Athletic Teams, will work out in our new Weight Room facility at the start of the new school year. The new facility houses a weight room, new Training Office/Area Office space for PE and Trainers. The PE office will also be used for referees in football, baseball and softball. The two new locker rooms will be completed shortly before the start of the school year. They will be used by football and track in the boys' locker room and softball, tennis and soccer in the girls' locker room. The girls' locker room will also be used as the visiting team locker room for football.

In our Performing Arts area, we will enjoy two new performance areas as well as additional office space and storage in the existing Band Room area. The current weight room and trainer's room will become two new performing arts areas along with practice rooms and storage. This area should be ready for our use after Fall Break.

Finally on the construction front, the FFA/Agriculture Dept will benefit from a new Greenhouse. The new greenhouse is located in the same area as the previous one. Updates include an entirely new greenhouse with a headhouse and all new plumbing and electrical. The greenhouse is substantially complete and our teacher will be trained to use the new controls during the summer.

In addition, there has been some cosmetic work inside the building to accommodate an existing program that we are bringing into the building. Look for those changes to be ready at the start of the school year.

G-CHS can't wait for the start of the 2020-2021 school year. We are excited to welcome our students back in the building and to put these new facilities to good use!
